DOJ IER Mission

The Department of Justice Immigrant and Employee Rights Section (IER) investigates and prosecutes discrimination claims based on citizenship/immigration status and national origin

- Hiring / Firing
- Recruitment / Referral for a Fee
- Employment Eligibility Verification (Form I-9 and E-Verify)
- Retaliation / Intimidation

DOJ IER Investigations

IER investigates discriminatory treatment during the Form I-9 and E-Verify processes. Employers may not, based on citizenship status or national origin

- Request more or different documents;
- Reject reasonably genuine-looking documents; or
- Specify certain documents

DOJ IER Investigations – Example 1

Example 1: Marcel, a refugee started a new job. On the 3rd day, the employer asked him to show his documents to complete the Form I-9. He showed his driver's license and Social Security card (unrestricted). The employer saw that he checked the box for “alien authorized to work” on the Form I-9 and asked him to show his Employment Authorization Document (work permit).

A request for more or different documents (based on citizenship status)
Employers must not require more documents than required or a specific document

DOJ IER Investigations – Example 2

Example 2: Maria, who has a foreign accent, shows her Social Security card (unrestricted) and school I.D. card to her employer for the Form I-9. The documents reasonably appear to be genuine and to relate to Maria, but the employer rejects her documents because of her accent.

A rejection of documents (based on national origin)
Employer must not reject reasonably genuine looking documents based on national origin

DOJ IER Investigations – Example 3

Example 3: Robert, a lawful permanent resident, completed the Form I-9 and checked the “lawful permanent resident” box. The employer requested that he show his Permanent Resident Card, even though he could have selected other documents to show from the list.

A request for a specific document (based on citizenship status)
Employers must not request documents proving the selected status

E-Verify displays an initial case result within a few seconds, though some cases may require additional action.

Using E-Verify

Enrolled employers must use E-Verify

- For newly hired employees
- After Form I-9 completed
 - SSN exception
- For employees assigned to work on a qualifying federal contract (existing or newly hired)
- Special situations

Employers must not use E-Verify before you accept job offer

Does My Employer Use E-Verify?

Employers must post the below posters

- in areas visible to prospective and existing employees

What is a TNC?

A Tentative Nonconfirmation (TNC)

Common reasons for TNCs:

- Information was not entered correctly
- Document could not be verified
- Name / immigration status change not reported
- Social Security number (SSN) does not match
